our room was how small it was. Our rooms were clean, but the bed cover was stained. The furniture was really outdated, especially the bathroom, which had an old pink suite and linoleum on the floor. The 'shower' was a hose that you fit onto the taps. The sink was in the bedroom, right next to the television sockets which seems pretty unsafe to me. We had dinner there, and it was well-cooked, but we were still hungry afterwards because the servings were so tiny. The drinks prices were extortionate - £5 for a small glass of wine. My friend ordered a brandy and coke, but the waitress brought him whisky and coke. When we complained, she just walked off! Not impressed. I would like to say it was cheap and cheerful but at £120 a night, it was neither - overpriced and depressing more like.

Just returned from a 3 day break here, and thought that the Coach Hotel was very good value for money. I had requested a quiet room and this was noted at reception. I got a great room - large, comfortable and clean, with a seating area overlooking the racecourse. The only disappointing thing was that there were no tea/coffee facilities in the room - not even a kettle. The furniture and decor was not particularly up-to-date, but that's what you would expect from an old hotel. There was a wide selection of well-cooked food on offer. At breakfast I had poached eggs, and they were done to perfection. In the evening, I had a delicious three-course meal, and I wasn't kept waiting for ages between courses, which is definitely a plus when you're dining alone. I found the staff friendly and always willing to help.

The hotel's is just 200 metres walk away from the racecourse, so it's really convenient. There's plenty of space to park. The bed was comfortable with clean cotton sheets. Good power shower. I would agree with some of the less favourable reviews on the site too, though. The room definitely needed some attention – it smelt musty and the furniture was old, cheap and battered. The bin hadn't been emptied from previous guests, and there was other rubbish on the floor. The fan in the bathroom was very loud, and the plumbing made strange noises in the night. The walls were thin too. Breakfast was okay, but there wasn't much of it.

Don't be fooled by the pictures online. What you see is definitely NOT what you get! First, it's not close to the city centre – it's at least a 35 minute walk. Furniture was old and dated, although the bed was comfortable. Tiny bathroom, with an absurdly loud extractor fan. No lock on the bathroom door and no toiletries, not even soap. There were cobwebs all over the hotel. The dining room is dark and uninviting, with no windows except one tiny one. The food simply was the type that gives Britain a bad name. Instant coffee and cheap sausages. Service was poor, with staff clearing the table while we were still eating.

Which reviewer says the following? Choose 'two reviewers' when two reviewers agree, and 'all reviewers' if all reviewers agree.

1. The hotel was too expensive.
2. The decor was old-fashioned.

3. The service was poor.
4. The service was good.
5. The bed clothes were dirty.

DOLPHINS

Dolphins are mammals although they live in the sea. They are members of a group of mammals called cetaceans or whales. Whales are divided into 2 groups. One group lacks teeth. Most large whales belong to this first group. Dolphins belong to the second group which has teeth.

Dolphins live mainly in warm, tropical seas in the open ocean, bays, and coral reefs. They join together in herds or groups. Sometimes as many as one million live together but they usually live in smaller herds. River dolphins can be seen in groups of only three or four.

Dolphins range in size from five feet to thirteen feet. They have black and white backs to help them blend into colorless deep seas. Their bellies are light-colored and help them avoid being seen by the sharks below. The light color blends with the sky-bright seas as the sharks look up at them.

The dolphin has a torpedo shape, long and thin. It can move quickly through the water as the flippers help it steer. The dolphin doesn't have bones. The fins keep the dolphin going in a straight line. Both the fin and flippers sense objects that may be in the way.

Strong muscles along the side of a dolphin move the tail up and down. Their skin is smooth and has no scales. A thick layer of blubber is under their skin. This layer keeps them warm. A dolphin's eyes move independently. One is located on each side of the head. They can see all around and straight ahead. They do not have a sense of smell.

Dolphins communicate with their voices and have good hearing. With these abilities they can catch food and speak with other dolphins. To find prey they make a clicking sound. The sound of this clicking bounces off anything in its path. The dolphins hear the echo of the clicking and know where prey is located. This method of finding prey is called echolocation.

Dolphins can also communicate with their friends by sounds. Certain sounds send different messages. Dolphins will go to help another dolphin if they hear a cry for aid. Each dolphin has its own specific sound. It can be identified by other dolphins. Being able to communicate well with others is a sign of great intelligence.

Dolphins swim between three and seven miles an hour. They can go as fast as twenty-two miles per hour. They usually dive from ten to one-hundred fifty feet to find food. A dive could last up to fifteen minutes.

The most common type of dolphin near the shore is the bottlenose dolphin. Their backs are grey and their underbellies white or pink. They grow to about eight feet. They weigh about two hundred pounds.

In summary, dolphins are mammals although they live in the sea. They are one of two groups of whales. Many larger whales belong to the group which has no teeth. Dolphins belong to the second group of whales and have teeth.
